Thoughts on Co-Op and Job Searches

Summer recruiting season is gearing up as companies, organizations, and government entities are looking to fill positions with university students graduating or on summer break. Career Services is here to assist you through any questions you may have about the process. The time to get your resume in order, start your searches, and prep your interview skills is now. Getting started now by taking advantage of company presentations put on by Career Services, reaching out to people in your professional network, or building your network through various virtual campus events, such as WML, to meet industry professionals will help you better understand what the current landscape is like. With the uncertainty of how Covid-19 will progress in the summer, starting immediately in your search will help you better understand what different establishments plan for the summer and beyond are, as well as easing some of the stress that comes through this process. Schedule an appointment with a career coordinator can help you get answers to your questions as well as receive assistance in building out a plan to give yourself the best opportunity to reach your goals. There is no quick fix when searching for a Co-Op or job, there will be starts and stops and days waiting to hear back after applying, but persistence and diligence are two things you can control to give yourself the best opportunity to secure employment.
