Thoughts on Networking

If you've been checking out the recently launched Connecting Keelhaulers interview series, you might have noticed a theme that alums keep touching on when looking for Co-Ops or jobs. Each of the interviewees have touched on how important networking has been for them in their career. Whether that is follow up calls and/or emails after meeting a recruiter at a career fair or company presentation, connecting with an alum or industry professional through good old fashioned outreach, or joining organizations on campus or in the community that put you in touch with new people, networking is a sure fire way to give you a leg up on the competition in your Co-op or job search. One of the reasons these alums agreed to be interviewed was because they saw how important networking had been for their careers and wanted to give back to current cadets at Cal Maritime. Each one detailed that you will definitely have to put in work to build a network, making sure you stay in periodic contact with people to build over time. Don't just reach out when you want something. Many times, this network building begins by showing a genuine interest in what the individual does. Soon, you may find your network working for you, reaching out to people they know to connect you. If you are nervous starting these conversations, please reach out to us in Career Services and we can help you get started on your journey.
